We are pleased to announce On Screen, a new part of Tlön Projects' Satellite Programme.

On Screen consists of a series of screenings of artists' films at De Uitkijk in Amsterdam – the Netherlands' first avant-garde cinema. The screenings will take place on Friday evenings and start at 21:00. Each evening will be dedicated to the oeuvre of a single artist whose works are part of Tlön Projects' imaginary collection. The programme was compiled by curators Chris Bestebreurtje and Petra Kuipers in close cooperation with the artists.

Video art has been an integral part of art production since the 1960s. Artists often use the medium more experimentally than mainstream directors. They are less bound by conventions such as commercial film durations or plot and can also present different kinds of narratives. Various perspectives can be combined by working with multiple screens. Or the artists focus on formal parameters such as time, light or the physical characteristics of celluloid. Sometimes other disciplines are involved such as performance, or settings, costumes or music are used which have often been created especially for the occasion.

Although video art is commonly displayed in white cubes, with or without other media, we have consciously opted for a black cube. Watching a film together in a cinema is one of the few collective experiences left in our individualised society. Sat in silence with a group, watching the same film provides connection. And an opportunity for dialogue, as afterwards Sam Steverlynck, curator at S.M.A.K. in Ghent, will talk to the artists. Besides a Q & A after the artists' talk, the audience can also exchange ideas whilst enjoying a drink in the lobby. These meetings for fans of artists' films will be held several times a year.
